The Basics of Social Capital:

Rangers are first and foremost members of the greater Burn community, and Ranging is our commitment and gift to the community. Our on-going commitment to supporting Burners in a way that they see, appreciate, and value means that Rangers have built up a large stash of "Social Capital" over time. Social Capital is a kind of street credit, a value that Burners place on the individual person, ideas and/or actions of those in support of the principles. As a result of this, a Ranger will at times be respected as an 'authority'. While this Social Capital is valuable, it can also easily be squandered e.g. by a Ranger acting in a non-Rangerly way. Put the needs of the community first and our social capital will always be in credit, as will the support you receive from other teams making their own investments into this pool of goodwill – AfrikaBurn, Burning Man and the regional events around the world. We support each other with development, training and empowerment for all Burners.

Orange you in the Dust yet?

Weird,

How the days fly and yet they drag? Its less than three months to go and everywhere there is much bustle and activity. Well, If you have anything to do with burning or TTITD as we affectionately don't refer to it often. Art, Outfits, Food prep ,Mutants ,Music, Theme camps, Tents, Plans and just about anything you can think of under the sun...growing in 14 000 minds, plotting, dreaming, scheming...

Ever heard of that collective consciousness thing? I hear it's a thing.

I dream Orange dreams.

I dream of being in that place, under that sky with all those mad, magical magnificent people.

I dream of Rangers

Tankwa isn't like everywhere else, it's a LOT like nowhere else in so many ways, it has its own unique set of freaky outies to freaky outy your freaky outy. Most people don't get it. They think we are crazy. But the Rangers get it, cause the Rangers are Burners. Burners that have been there, done that and still have the t shirt cause no one in their right mind moops an event t- shirt anyways. No one in their right mind moops... We aren't always right minded though are we? And that's when you need a Ranger, an Orange friend that gets you, gets where you are, and gets what you need. A Ranger that's been where you are, that can see what you see. Rangers are special; they've been adapted specifically to the conditions of Tankwa, to its citizens and even its denizens. Tailor made but one size fits all. They arise from the dust when they are needed, not unlike the Greater Lesser Spotted Stoffadil, and recede when no longer required. Fading back into that mythical dust that pervades the very quarters of our souls. Where do they come from?

They come from YOU, They are YOU. You with the Fabulous Outfit, You with the amazing theme camp, You with the mind blowing art, You with the ability and the inclination to help a brother/sister out. You are the Rangers, Rangers are You.

And so the Orange of my dreams continue

I dream of a Family

I dream of Friends

I dream of You
